Mid Enchanted Summers Night

Befall thy hands in pure delight
Bathe beneath the sea of stars
Gathered thoughts so near, yet far*

*Flicker once thy hand, I shun
Mystic River, valleys hum
Fall of grace upon thy thunder
Vanishing hand amidst my wonder*

*Cobblestones beside the brook
Yee hath come, beneath thy valley thunder
Vestige is thy, hand I wonder
Who has seen, thy chastised look*

*Merciful be thy, breath I take
To crumble beneath my earthly whims
Will the earth beneath me shake?
Heaven knows, the path upon which I've taken*

*Moonlit River, mountain gong
Quill thy hand the day is long
Pursuer of thy heart I cradle
Cards are left upon my table*

- Sonnet Style

Until That Day

Entwine me once and take me twice
Quilled by you, with gentle hand
To feel the essence of cool crashed ice
In a hope that you might understand
I felt the seed of loves delight
When you were resting by my side
Beneath a sea of glistening light
I felt neither fear nor longing to hide
With baited breath, I breathe you in
And felt the pulse beneath the skin
So this is where our love begins
For in our soul we are like kin
Be the one my heart enslaves
Until that day, where we both mark the grave

- Sestina Style

Dream

*Twilight in front of the computer screen
Moonlit in its ivory white
Silent whispers echo dreams
Thou have known thy gentleness
And I have whispered in the mist
Solemn thunder echo sky*

*As stars glisten in the sky
Moths are knocking at the screen
As the moon surrenders to the mist
Daylight dream the dream in white
And thou have known thy gentleness
Twilight whispers in my dreams*

*As I'm sheltered in my dreams
Towards the heaven haven sky
There are times in gentleness
Casting shadows from the screen
Glimmering shadows cast in white
As my breath surrenders into the mist*

*Deem the day of ghostly mist
As there are whispers in my dreams
Bathed beneath the moon in white
Twilight bliss beneath the haven sky
And there are voices in the screen
Gentle in thy gentleness*

*Silent whispers call my gentleness
Bathed beneath the moon in mist
Silent passage in the screen
A sense so wholesome in my dreams
Twain thy hand, towards the sky
Heavens knows my dreams are white*

*Clouds appear in ghostly white
Loving hand in gentleness
Towards the heavenly haven sky
There is silence in the mist
And passiveness in silent dreams
A silent movie picture screen*

*Shadow cast among the screen, glistening in pleasant white and there are dreams, in gentleness
Rolling plain in gentle mist, as echoes whisper in the sky*

- Terza Rima Style

Lure Me

*Twilight dwindles beside the sea
So cumbersome is thy heart in rhyme
Echoed murmurs speak to ye
Portray thy sense disclaim of fashion
Falsetto of thy outstretched hand
Alas thy rose enraptures passion
Compassion bleeds by noble hands
Unlike tears of fallen heavens
Swept away like grains of sand
Forlorn be thy lovers hand
Warmth in that by which we endear each other
Lure me in my tasty treat noble deeds I understand*

- Triolet Style

Melancholy

*My heart yearns yet dreams of plenty
Melancholy against the wind
My heart yearns beneath the tower
My heart yearns yet dreams of plenty
Storm cells gather by the jetty
Ebony vines await thy kin
My heart yearns yet dreams of plenty
Melancholy against the wind*

- Haiku Style

Haiku - Autumn

*Autumn leaves falling
Knotted limbs are left behind
Leaves are swept away*

Haiku - Voices

*Sounds heard everywhere
Voices whisper in the still Near the break of dawn*

Haiku - Whispers

*Echoed whispers speak
Bouncing round inside my head
As I walk the halls*

- Quote Style

- Quote: Lonelier less I be, then be the one to burden thee
- Quote: Lightening follows rain, But alas for we are all the same
- Quote: Mystic, moonlit rivers blend, alas farewell to you my friend

Charlemagne's Quintet

Charlemagne: For romance has beckoned within my heart! As gentle as tears upon the heavens part.

As I listen and surrender to her humble voice, among the heavens upon this iridescent night.

Lady Chadwick: Pray that she may be thy lovely suitor, and your lover, then to love and know thy hand upon which you treasure, then woo by days end in the mid of spring. Then to woo! And know thine heart and faith.

Charlemagne: Cast not upon the shadows that shed thy fears, unless ye know my pain and see my fears. What light has shown and shone so bright, then know thy own heart in pure delight.

Lady Chadwick: Impulsive as the lover leaps and in their fortitude thou have sought.

Lady Chadwick: Then to be, the one that, thou have wooed!

Charlemagne: Iridescent light by candle flame, midst this eve in gentle rain, somber sound upon my cello and there are times, my heart feels mellow

Christmas Message

*If I could give you just one wish
This Christmas it would have to be
For a world of peace and love*

*A world free of conflict
A world with no suffering
A world of goodwill and cheer*

Please accept this token
Of my love*

So have a merry Christmas
And I wish you the very best

Dr. Pingleton's Great Adventure

Mr. Pingleton had a poodle its name was strudel. No one really knew why Mr. Pingleton had called his dog strudel. Perhaps it was his favourite food.

While looking out the window he thought to himself about how lovely the evening was. Then he turned to strudel and said, "it's getting dark outside shall we go for a walk? Strudel barked with a loud yip! So up they got and off they went.

The moon was high and the stars shone bright. Look at all the pretty lights. One was blue while another was red and one looked like it was sown together with a piece of thread. Then they saw a sudden flash in the evening sky "did you see that strudel?" "A shooting star." All strudel had seen was Miss Vanderhart's cat and with that they were off over the hedge and through the bushes while Mr. Pingleton called out in earnest for strudel to come back right now. He was much to tire the chase strudel around. Plus it was almost time for bed.

Miss Vanderhart screamed and strudel came running back. Sorry Miss Vanderhart it won't happen again and so the two headed home. Once they got home Strudel hopped into his basket ready to go to sleep and Mr. Pingleton turned out the lights and said goodnight and headed for his own bed.

Early the next morning the telephone rang. "Hello," he said, "Hello Mr. Pingleton, it's the hospital again it seems Mr. Peterson has been up till morning light, and has given the nurses quite a fright." "Ok then I'll grab my coat and hat and be there soon."

A short time later Mr. Pingleton arrived at the hospital, "hello doctor he is over there." "Thank you nurse." "He thinks he's a shell, or maybe just maybe he's under Miss Winterbournes spell." "Or maybe nurse he's a little unwell." "Well I guess only time will tell doctor."

"Hello Mr. Peterson, how are you?" Mr. Pingleton asked. "Pickle my grandmother and tickle my toes, Will you look at that I can even touch my nose," "Have you been up all night doing this Mr Peterson?" "I think I have, you could be right." "Perhaps you should go to bed for a while and don't forget to turn out the lights." "I think I will rest for a while I wouldn't want to lose my smile." "Sounds like an excellent idea Mr Peterson." "Goodnight then," "Yes, goodnight doctor."

While I'm here nurse I may just check on Mrs. Winterbourne and see if she is doing." "Ok doctor she's in the sitting room."

Hello Mrs. Winterbourne how are you today? Hello Dr. Pingleton I'm drawing a kart but the problem is it just won't start. May I take a look I might even be able to help? I see the problem you've forgotten to draw in the key. By gees I think you have got it; shall we go for a ride? That would be splendid and such a delight. Doctor, Hold on to your hat hold on to your locket and with that they took off like a rocket. Down the hall past the dispensary doctor can you feel the intensity? Around the corner they go. Look out for old Mable watch out for the table with a loud crash around the next bend they go. Thank god that was the table and not old lady Mable. Watch out for that crack, look out for that cricket. Oh that cricket, He gets on my wicket. He keeps trying to tell everyone he suffers from Rickets. Oh Dr. Pingleton I forgot to add sprockets my dear Mrs. Winterbourne we're not trying to build ourselves a rocket. There not enough room with this entire ceiling. I bet the others would really be reeling if we blasted the top of this ceiling.

New Zealand

*As we unite as one nation beneath the southern skies
We will look to the horizon and hold our heads with pride
For the essence of our country
Is present in our cities, towns, and homes
And we will carry it with pride wherever we may roam*

*For we are a land of many people
But united we are one. We will triumph over adversity
For we are proud of heritage. For we know where we have been
As a nation have endured the greatest hardships
And yet the essence of our nation
Has always been present in our lives*

*For there is beauty in abundance
From our snow covered mountain ranges
To the wide open plains and our shores
The spirit of our country
Will be present in every brook and every stream*

*For the spirit that is our country
Will always be present in the hearts
Of every one of us who. Call New Zealand home
And as we look to the future where our hopes and dreams reside
The pride of this great nation will always be present by our sides*
